Endeavour was the final fully operational shuttle to be built, entering into service in May 1992. It made a crucial contribution to the construction of the International Space Station, completing its final mission in 2011.

The shuttle was named after HMS Endeavour, the ship captained by James Cook on his first voyage of discovery, during which Europeans set foot on the Australian mainland for the first time.

Endeavour: to exert oneself to do something; make an effort; strive. We must constantly endeavour if we are to succeed.
